ITEM 8.01 OTHER EVENTS

On April 20, 2005, The Clorox Company announced an agreement with the Internal Revenue Service resolving tax issues related to its investment in a limited partnership investment fund.

As previously announced, the Company became a limited partner in 1998 in an investment fund that invests in developed-market currencies. In 2004, the IRS proposed certain adjustments that would reattribute taxable income generated by the investment fund to Clorox. In June 2004, the Company filed a petition in United States Tax Court contesting these adjustments, which will be dismissed as part of the settlement upon court approval. As a result of its settlement agreement, Clorox will make cash payments totaling about $228 million, of which $78 million was paid in March 2005.

As a matter of course, Clorox accrues for certain tax contingencies. In the third quarter of fiscal year 2005, the Company will release about $23 million in excess tax accruals related to this matter, thereby decreasing third-quarter income tax expense.
