In 2014, six plaintiffs from the multi-district litigation (MDL) related to personal injury cases associated with exposure to PFOA in drinking water were selected for individual trial. In the second of these six bellwether cases to be tried, the plaintiff, Mr. Freeman, alleged that exposure to PFOA in drinking water caused his testicular cancer. On July 6, 2016, a jury in Ohio awarded compensatory damages to Mr. Freeman in the amount of $5.1 million. On July 8, 2016, in the second phase of the Freeman trial, the jury awarded $0.5 million in punitive damages plus attorneys' fees. E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company (the "Company") will appeal.

The first bellwether case was tried to a verdict in 2015 and the jury awarded $1.6 million in compensatory damages. The plaintiff, Ms. Bartlett, alleged that exposure to PFOA in drinking water caused kidney cancer. The Company is appealing the decision.

One case was voluntarily withdrawn from the bellwether trial pool by plaintiffs. The remaining three cases have been settled for amounts that are individually and in the aggregate, immaterial to the Company.

An approximate breakdown of the about 3,500 lawsuits in this MDL is shown below. In the majority of the cases, plaintiffs claim multiple injuries; as a result the number of claims does not sum to 3,500. About 75 percent of the 3,500 lawsuits in this MDL involve claims that allege high cholesterol and/or thyroid disease and less than ten percent allege cancer.
